

White Horse

A new community of stately homes that reflects the heritage of traditional Main Line architecture, located on the finest property to reach the real estate market in years.

White Horse is an outstanding opportunity to own a stately new home in a truly majestic setting. Our home designs reflect the tasteful architectural heritage of the Main Line, updated with materials that create a care-free lifestyle and amenities that will pamper your family. Our architects have spent countless hours refining each home's plan and researching the special details that define the character of the Main Line and the casual elegance of Chester County. The resulting community will offer its residents the quiet dignity of a traditional neighborhood, in a pastoral setting that belies its strategic location. Major routes offer rapid access to the many corporate, cultural and educational opportunities in and around Philadelphia. The adjoining property is owned by the renowned Episcopal Academy, one of the finest private schools in the country.

The Nolen family's building legacy began in the 1880's by James E. Nolen, who had emigrated to Philadelphia from Ireland. From those early days, four generations of the Nolen family have contributed to the Philadelphia story. In the 1930's the Nolen family built more than 2,000 homes, including the classically beautiful Erlen residential section of the city and commercial projects like the Erlen theater. James A. Nolen III, followed his father's path through Notre Dame and graduated with a degree in architecture. He pioneered the Nolen family's state-of-the-art design and construction techniques. Today, Jim's entire team maintains the superior reputation for quality and integrity that his family has enjoyed for four generations. Their pride is your assurance of a carefully crafted home and a lasting investment.
